Getting the latest technology on your yacht can be a frustrating and painful experience. Anyone who's invested in costly technology knows that it can be fragile and hard to maintain.

The experts at Marine Technology Arts take the burden off your shoulders. Marine Technology Arts provides premium modular marine information systems and backs them up with support and training. We cater to the yacht owner who wants to spend his time aboard enjoying his vessel instead of worrying about her.

The team at Marine Technology Arts is composed of information professionals. We are the people who built the Internet infrastructure for leading US telecoms. We are the people who provided voice systems to the International Space Station for NASA. We are the people who monitored our nation's safety with signal processing for the National Security Agency

And now, we are the people bringing technology to your yacht.

Offering Internet connectivity, radar adjustment, satellite television, security systems, networked systems, and support and training, the reliable professionals at (business name) can meet all your marine technology needs.

Are you getting the most out of your navigation software? We will come right to your yacht to teach you how to maximize your investment. We believe learning in the real environment is more effective than a classroom experience -- and after all, the safety of your vessel and those aboard her can depend on your skills.

Have you ever tried to find a repair person for your onboard technology in a strange port? That's an experience no one wants to go through twice! We are on call around the clock and can fly to your location to conduct repairs. You can even keep us on retainer.

Are you worried about your valuable vessel when you're away from the marina? We can monitor your bilge and engine room automatically, paging you when a problem is detected.

Do you wish that you could conduct business as easily on your yacht as you can at the office? We can network your boat to accommodate a floating office -- and don't forget, that's a tax deduction!

Don't waste time with amateurs. Go with the best and get it done right the first time. Your peace of mind and, ultimately, your wallet will benefit from a call to (business name), the marine information systems experts.
